Corps telephone changes mean new numbers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. -- The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Kansas City District, is modernizing its telephone system, bringing changes to telephone numbers for many calling the district offices.

Telephone numbers within the district have already changed in many offices. All telephones will be on the new system by the end of June.

The basic change to numbers within the district's main offices is a change in prefix, from the original 983 to the new 389. Extensions remain the same as before the changeover.

Public numbers at the district's lake offices and other field offices will not change.

The reason for the change is a move to voice-over-Internet transmission for the District's telephone system. The change conserves money while providing more modern telephone service to the district.

For more information about the district's telephone service, contact the Kansas City District Public Affairs office at (816) 389-3486.
